

Eulogy

“We do not know this Australian's name and we never will. We do not know his rank or his battalion. We do not know where he was born, nor precisely how and when he died. We do not know where in Australia he had made his home or when he left it for the battlefields of Europe. We do not know his age or his circumstances – whether he was from the city or the bush; what occupation he left to become a soldier; what religion, if he had a religion; if he was married or single. We do not know who loved him or whom he loved. If he had children we do not know who they are. His family is lost to us as he was lost to them. We will never know who this Australian was.

Yet he has always been among those whom we have honoured. We know that he was one of the 45,000 Australians who died on the Western Front. One of the 416,000 Australians who volunteered for service in the First World War. One of the 324,000 Australians who served overseas in that war and one of the 60,000 Australians who died on foreign soil. One of the 100,000 Australians who have died in wars this century.

He is all of them. And he is one of us.

This Australia and the Australia he knew are like foreign countries. The tide of events since he died has been so dramatic, so vast and all-consuming, a world has been created beyond the reach of his imagination.

He may have been one of those who believed that the Great War would be an adventure too grand to miss. He may have felt that he would never live down the shame of not going. But the chances are he went for no other reason than that he believed it was his duty - the duty he owed his country and his King.

Because the Great War was a mad, brutal, awful struggle, distinguished more often than not by military and political incompetence; because the waste of human life was so terrible that some said victory was scarcely discernible from defeat; and because the war which was supposed to end all wars in fact sowed the seeds of a second, even more terrible, war - we might think this Unknown Soldier died in vain.

But, in honouring our war dead, as we always have and as we do today, we declare that this is not true.

For out of the war came a lesson which transcended the horror and tragedy and the inexcusable folly.

It was a lesson about ordinary people – and the lesson was that they were not ordinary.

On all sides they were the heroes of that war; not the generals and the politicians but the soldiers and sailors and nurses – those who taught us to endure hardship, to show courage, to be bold as well as resilient, to believe in ourselves, to stick together.

The Unknown Australian Soldier we inter today was one of those who by his deeds proved that real nobility and grandeur belong not to empires and nations but to the people on whom they, in the last resort, always depend.”

This provides details about awards and decorations, military abbreviations, military codes and regulations.

Australians at War Film Archive, <https://australiansatwarfilmarchive.unsw.edu.au/>

I was able to find details about Kenneth Goudie who served in the Korean War from this website managed by the University of NSW.

The Australian War Memorial, <http://www.awm.gov.au>

This is a primary source for identifying people, embarkation rolls for the First World War, military history and photographs.

Information about Brigadier Frank Hosking is also contained in Australia in the War of 1939-1945 Vol vi, Page 61. Page 87 of the same volume provides war diary entries of details of operation orders that were drawn up by Frank regarding deployment of troops, ammunition/armaments, rations, security, and air drops prior to action. It also included deployment details for 10 'native' personnel.

Commonwealth War Graves Commission, <http://www.cwgc.org/>

This site provides details of burial places and memorials for deceased service men and women. It identifies the units in which they served and awards and recommendations.

National Archives of Australia, <http://www.naa.gov.au>

This is the main primary source for finding and identifying people and their military history. It contains Attestation Forms (completed on enlistment showing date of birth, next of kin, occupation, service number, physical description, marital status), Service and Casualty Forms (showing movements, transfers, injuries, death, hospitalisation, promotions) and military correspondence (awards of medals, letters to next of kin regarding injuries or death and post-war matters). Some archives have not been digitised but the originals can be examined – in Canberra for the First and Second World Wars and the Korean War, and in Melbourne for the Vietnam War. Paybook photographs are also included in some archives although the quality is often poor.

Department of Veteran Affairs Nominal Rolls, <http://www.nominal-rolls.dva.gov.au/>
Sometimes there are mistakes in the spelling of a family name and/or in the initials of individuals. This is the most important source to be used because it links all the details needed to identify the correct person. Details include name, service, date and place of birth, service number, date of enlistment, locality of enlistment, next of kin, date of discharge, rank, whether a prisoner of war or not, whether killed or not, and unit on discharge.. It facilitates easy comparisons to assist in correct identification of people, say, with similar names. For example, a person might be known by a different name to their first name.

Nick Szwed and Phillip Symons provided invaluable assistance in enhancement of photographs.

BOARD'S PERSONNEL—SECOND WORLD WAR.

Although a number of years has elapsed since the termination of the Second World War, it is thought desirable to place on record the names of those officers and employees of the Board who served in the Forces. A similar record of those who served in the first World War appeared in the Board's Fifth Annual Report.

The following list contains the names of 60 members of the staff and 536 employees, although there are probably others of whom particulars are not recorded. Nine officers and at least eight employees lost their lives.
